

“Good hair for what?!”

For many women, the natural hair movement has been about freedom - freedom from relaxers, freedom from the fear of water (rain, sweat, etc.), freedom to explore your roots through, well...your roots. Yet, we all have that one auntie who always has to let you know exactly how she feels about your hair.

"Your hair is too pretty to lock."

"What kind of job will you get with dreadlocks?"

"I just think you look so pretty with straight hair."

"They're unprofessional."

All of these voices can make your journey of self-acceptance much more difficult. It's important to have a physical or digital community around you that will build you up when you've got so many people trying to tear you down. Here's a reminder:

You are a beautiful human. You can rock your hair however you'd like. You deserve all of the love.

And contrary to popular belief, locs are very professional, stunning, and versatile! Don't believe me? Just look...
